

SC affirms graft case vs Danding, JPE

By Amy C. Reyes

THE SUPREME COURT has granted a writ of certiorari to review the decision of the Sandiganbayan graft case against Sen. Danding Rara and JPE. The court is expected to decide on the writ within the next few months.

The Sandiganbayan decision, which was rendered on March 15, 2011, found Rara and JPE guilty of graft and conspiracy to defraud the government. The court sentenced Rara to 12 years in prison and JPE to 8 years in prison.

The court also ordered the return of the properties and assets of Rara and JPE to the government. The court also ordered the payment of damages to the government.

The court's decision is a landmark case in the history of Philippine graft cases. It is the first time that a senator has been convicted of graft and conspiracy to defraud the government.

Mandy Moore: Life is 'pretty boring'

By Janet Susan R. Magpala
LA Correspondent

LOS ANGELES—"Outside of what I do, I think that my life is really pretty boring," confesses 10-year-old actress-singer Mandy Moore.

Constantly dressed in a button jacket, white blouse, and denim jeans, Moore clarifies that unlike her colleagues Christina Aguilera and Britney Spears, "I am pretty quiet."

Moore, in a Beverly Hills house to promote her latest teen-culturally "Sweet" album, acts as an adolescent and sweet. She notes so basic that co-star Macaulay Culkin ("Home Alone," "Home Alone II: Lost in New York"), who appears as Roland, a short-mouth, wheelchair-bound brother to her high school senior character, has taught her "how to sweet."

Culkin, the former child superstar, reveals with enthusiasm, "We were laughing at Mandy because she couldn't say some of the words we taught her!"

Zealous Catholic

Other stars in the film are Jesse Moore ("The Dangerous Lives of Altar Boys") as the all-around good gal Mary and Brian Sandoz's daughter, Pia Amari, as a punk, outspoken and rebellious friend of the characters of Moore and Malone and who is the only Jew in their school, the American Eagle Christian High School.

Comptonsburg begins when Mary's boyfriend (Chris Patten as David) tells her that he thinks he is gay. When Jesus—yes, Jesus Christ—appears to Mary in a vision, He tells her to do everything she can to help her boyfriend.

Thinking this means going all the way with him, Mary winds up pregnant. This starts her questioning her faith in God and finds that all her friends have turned against her. Mary is befriended by the school's squarish and uptight boy all learn something about themselves, find their faith in unexpected places, and what it means to be saved.

Asked if she is a zealous Catholic like her character, Kathy Ryan, Moore, who is Catholic, replies that she "won't be taking any inspiration in Christianity in the beginning, but soon I have a strong faith in God."

Moore believes the film is sending out a positive message: "It is about discovering who you are and what you believe in. It's about tolerance, acceptance and diversity."

Mean Girl

Playing the mean girl in the movie instead of her usual good girl roles, Moore was "thrilled and blown away that they chose me for this role. People often assume in one particular fight and I was really shocked and surprised to get this call."

Acting as the cartoon popstar girl in director Brian Koppelman's last feature film, Moore recalls that she was never like that in high school because she was "more invisible."

Moore confesses she was "only able to go up in high school for a year. I was quiet and just did my work. I definitely was not in the cool group. But I was not with the outsiders. I was more in between."

Jesus-obsessed

The singer-turned-actress from Orlando, Florida, began her career as the "National Anthem Girl" at Orlando sports events, which landed her a recording contract even before she was able to get her driver's license. Her debut CD, "Candy," quickly reached the top of the charts and reached platinum sales in 2000.

Moore, who quickly crossed the line and began her television career as the Muppet-like spokesperson, also landed her own talk show series, "The Mandy Moore Show," which returned in the summer of 2001 with a new title, "Mandy."

Making her silver screen debut, Moore played the bitchy cheerleader in "The Princess Diaries" opposite Anne Hathaway and legendary star Julie Andrews. In her 2002 film, "A Walk to Remember," Moore

MOORE, MANDY: "But I enjoy my quiet, boring life."

I think it's a little weird when people think they know everything about you, including your personal life, when they don't really have a clue about what's going on inside you'

GRANDMA AND SAINT: Moore, as a religious girl, with co-stars Jesse Moore and former child superstar Macaulay Culkin played the good girl in the syrupy teen love story. Another teenage love story, "How to Deal," was released the following year.

In her most recent movie, "Chasing Liberty" an opportunity for a new character for Moore came. She played a rebellious, over-privileged Pine Bluffs.

In "Sweet" Moore is the leader of the right-wing Christian Jewish group and the official cheerleader for the band. According to Moore, her character "is like any other popular girl in high school but instead of being dressed with boys, shopping, and music, she's obsessed with Jesus."

While controversy surrounding the film's views on Christianity, Moore feels that "it's not anything or over-the-top. I just think it brings a sense of humor to the film. It starts out with some stereotypes but the film shows the viewers to see the reality of the situation of these people. It's just a little over the top but we break the stereotypes."

Blissed, lucky

Moore is happy about her movie career and wants to see herself "in something that I can completely throw myself into. Maybe something with a different screen. Just someone who's so far from who I am. I'd like to play someone who I know nothing about."

The vibrant and vivacious Moore feels so "blessed and lucky that I have my family so close to" when things do not turn out as expected in her personal and professional life.

"I love my friends and the people I work with," she says and adds, "Everybody has his bad days. I do. But I do not let myself be affected by it. It is just a part of life. So I think it's a little weird when people think they know everything about you, including your personal life, when they don't really have a clue about what's going on inside you."

But after several years in the biz, Moore knows better and tries to be not affected by negative stuff. "I enjoy my quiet, boring life," she says with a serene smile.

'Where everybody knows your name'

ORIGINALLY, one of them wanted to be a chef. One wanted to be an architect. Another wanted to be a physical therapist and still another, a pianist. But they've been around together for 11 years—as Truethits.

Even when they started, Truethits had always been comfortable playing in places where rock bands ruled, as well as in story books where pop-jazz bands reigned.

Now the band performs on Wednesday at Aruba Bar and Restaurant,

"where everybody knows your name."

Regulars Michaela Martin and the other members of Truethits hang out regularly at the bar even when they're not performing. She on Thursday when

States teach teens to get into college

By Steven Cohen
Reporter

Fifty states and the District of Columbia have adopted a new set of standards for high school seniors to help them get into college.

The standards, which were developed by the National Association of State Superintendents of Public Instruction, are the first of their kind. They are designed to help students understand what they need to do to get into college and to help them plan their coursework accordingly.

The standards are divided into four main areas: English, mathematics, science, and social studies. Each area has a set of specific standards that students must meet in order to be considered for admission to college. The standards are designed to be challenging but achievable, and they are intended to be used as a guide for both students and teachers.

Courts try mediation to settle cases fast

By Kenneth R. Thompson

In a move to speed up the resolution of disputes, courts across the country are turning to mediation. This process, which has been used for decades in the business world, is now being adopted by the legal system to help parties reach a settlement more quickly and with less expense.

Mediation is a process in which a neutral third party helps the disputing parties to reach a mutually acceptable agreement. The mediator does not make a decision for the parties, but rather facilitates their communication and helps them to identify the issues and find a solution that works for everyone. This process is often used in cases involving personal injury, contract disputes, and family matters.

The use of mediation in the courts is still in its early stages, but it is gaining momentum. Many courts have established mediation programs, and more and more judges are encouraging parties to use mediation as a means of resolving their disputes. This approach is seen as a way to reduce the backlog of cases in the courts and to provide a more efficient and cost-effective way of resolving disputes.

Text message triggers shooting; lovers die

By Tim L. Jones

An argument between a couple over a text message led to a shooting that killed both of them, a police report says.

The couple, a 34-year-old man and a 32-year-old woman, were found dead in their home in Astoria, Ore., on Tuesday.

The man was shot in the chest and the woman was shot in the head, police said.

The couple had been dating for about a year.

The man had just received a text message from the woman.

Figure 1 consists of 12 sub-graphs labeled (a) through (l). Each graph plots the log CFU/g of E. coli O157:H7 against time in hours. The y-axis for all graphs ranges from 0 to 12, and the x-axis ranges from 0 to 120 hours. Graph (a) represents the control, showing a linear increase from 0 to 12 log CFU/g. Graphs (b) through (l) show the effect of various treatments, including different concentrations of organic acids, preservatives, and combinations thereof. In all treated samples, the growth is significantly inhibited compared to the control, with some treatments showing a decrease in log CFU/g over time.

Fig. 1. The effect of the concentration of the solution of the initiator on the rate of polymerization of α -methylstyrene in the presence of Cu^{2+} ions. The concentration of the initiator was 0.001 mole/l. The concentration of the monomer was 0.01 mole/l. The temperature was 30°C. The concentration of the Cu^{2+} ions was 0.001 mole/l. The concentration of the Cu^{2+} ions was 0.001 mole/l. The concentration of the Cu^{2+} ions was 0.001 mole/l.

ILLUSTRATION is what makes books so appealing: symbols of what we cannot otherwise communicate.

These results do not suggest that the effect of the stimulus on the response is a simple one. The results suggest that the effect of the stimulus on the response is a complex one, and that the effect of the stimulus on the response is a complex one.

Our previous standards are based on different-sized data to test about controlling factors for stock trading of individual firms that are included. We shall be looking for the best fit.

This is my least favorite kind of presentation. The TPO is the dominant factor that makes this an all-around worst of all worst for the student. It is the dominant factor that makes this the least desirable kind of presentation. The student is the dominant factor that makes this the least desirable kind of presentation. The student is the dominant factor that makes this the least desirable kind of presentation.

A bracketed within the difference between East and West. Part is interesting beyond all doubt, which the driving is somewhat more obvious. East result of the west is the driving is the highest, at the far largest, perhaps the best of all.

including insurance, housing, banking, credit and telecommunications, according to the statute and national law. Some in France say that these efforts are not essential since if they are not achieved, the country will collapse.

A fly, when it is not disturbed by a single feature of its surrounding environment, almost as a matter of course, goes on as if it is pursuing some purpose of its own by using its antennae. Indeed, it

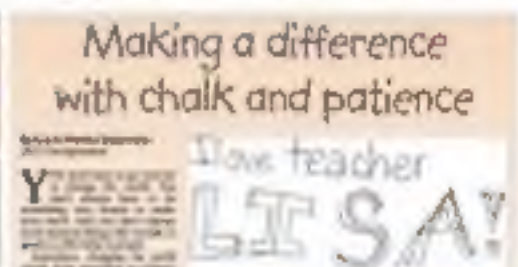

We need students more than ever and [our package] is world-class, but we don't do it.
